Introduction

As we embark upon our 36th City of Aberdeen Clydesdale Horse Show, I would like to extend a very warm welcome to the exhibitors, past and new, seasoned spectators, and members of the passing public who have joined us today. An event such as this would be impossible to run without the support of all of our sponsors who are listed later in this programme. They truly form the financial backbone of the show, and we are very grateful to them for their generosity, each and every year.

Health and Safety always plays a huge part in organizing a public event as you will appreciate. This year we have had to make changes to the exhibitor parking to meet criteria set out within our Insurance Policy. Changes are never easy to accept if you have been coming to the show for many years. However we hope the parking officials guiding you, and the direction signs from the gate into Duthie Park help smooth your arrival this morning. This year, we not only have fenced off exhibitor parking, but a holding area in front of both rings. The horses are to remain within these designated areas at all times. I hope as a seasoned spectator, or other member of the public, you do not feel you are missing out getting up close and personal to them and understand why it is necessary.

In attendance at the Show today are the Producer and Director of Watch Scotland Limited, who have been commissioned by the BBC to make a documentary entitled The Greatest Horse. They will be interviewing some of our exhibitors and judges, and filming throughout the day.

Another change for this year sees the Champion of Champion's Class removed from our schedule due to dwindling entries. The Trophy donated for the Champion of Champion's class will now be presented to the Best New Exhibitor on the day.

The Show committee have put in many, many hours of work (all of it unpaid) to make the show happen today, drawing in family and friends to assist, for which I am most grateful.

All that remains for me now, is to hope the weather remains favorable, and to wish you an enjoyable and happy day.

George Skinner, Chairman.

HEALTH AND SAFETY STATEMENT

The Committee recognizes and accepts its responsibility for providing a safe and healthy show site and working environment for all stand holders, exhibitors, helpers and visiting public. It is their first intention to ensure, so far as reasonably practicable, the health, safety and welfare of all stand holders, exhibitors, helpers and members of the public.

The Committee also wishes to point out that everyone attending the event, including all visitors and members of the public have a duty and responsibility to ensure their own safety and of others around them.

We welcome and thank you for your co-operation towards that aim

The history behind the City of Aberdeen Clydesdale Horse Show

The City of Aberdeen Clydesdale Horse Show was founded by Aberdeen City Council in 1982 and has been running for the past 35 years. It has always been held within the scenic grounds of Duthie Park in Aberdeen. Originally it was hosted and funded entirely by the City Council, who at that time had many Clydesdales still working in Aberdeen as draught horses. It is a very well-known event in the annual Clydesdale Showing Calendar and was a highlight in the City Council working year, to show their working horses off to the public. In addition, it provided an opportunity just like all other shows in Scotland, for other breeders and owners to come to Aberdeen and take part in the traditional in-hand and harness classes. Of course such a large gathering of Clydesdales in the one place, provided those spectating with a fantastic opportunity to get up close to these amazing animals.

Aberdeen has previously boasted entry numbers in Scotland second only to The Royal Highland Show, and is considered the largest gathering of horses in the North East. The Aberdeen Champion of Champion Class attracting competitors from all across Country. In more recent years the popularity of the Clydesdale as a ridden horse across all equine disciplines such as dressage, show jumping, side saddle and cross country has increased. The numbers of these big horses now competing and qualifying for major events, such as Blair Horse Trials and Horse of the Year Show (HOYS) has rocketed, and shows us just how versatile a breed it is. Traditional heavy horse shows were then modernized in line with this popularity as a riding horse, and a class for ridden Clydesdales was added to the schedule.

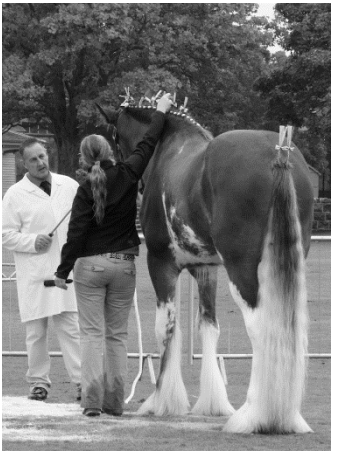
Within the last decade or so, the ownership of the show transferred to a group of local Clydesdale enthusiasts when the City Council decided to step down from organizing the event. A committee was formed and the organizing and running of the annual event became their responsibility. For several years thereafter the City Council actively sponsored a proportion of the running costs, leaving the Committee to make up the shortfall through sponsorship and donations. The City Council no longer donate any money towards the show but provide the venue at Duthie Park, free of charge. The City of Aberdeen Clydesdale Horse Show is very grateful to all those who volunteer to serve on the Committee, and all those who sponsor it.

Without the generosity of these people it would cease to exist. Our Main Sponsor, Malcom Allan House Builder, has been a huge supporter over the years and the show is indebted to him for his enthusiasm for the Clydesdale horse. Only by promoting the breed and its versatility at shows like this, as a ridden horse as well as a draught animal, and encouraging people to get involved, will we continue to keep the breed going.

The Clydesdale Horse

The Clydesdale Horse originated in the early eighteenth century when imported Flemish stallions belonging to the Duke of Hamilton were mated with smaller native draught mares in the Clyde valley. This resulted in a larger horse capable of heavy draught work on farms. These horses were in great demand, and at the annual sales in Lanark many hundreds of horses changed hands not just to local buyers. The Clydesdale Horse became popular in the north of England and the north of Ireland, as well as across the rest of Scotland. Given their capabilities, in addition to their pivotal role in the farming communities, the horses were used in industry as well as for carting within major cities. The fame of the horses also spread across the world, with many being exported by sea to America, Canada, Australia and New Zealand. At its peak, Scotland had around 140,000 farm horses plus an unknown number in towns and cities, most of which were Clydesdales.

In showing, a judge will look at a number of key points on the horse. When moving, they should lift their feet cleanly off the ground so that someone standing behind it can see the inside of every shoe. The hind legs should be close together, with the points of the hocks turning inwards rather than straight, pasterns should be long and set at an angle from the hoof head to the fetlock, and the neck should be well arched ascending from an oblique shoulder with high withers. The horses should be broad in front and they should have a good deep body. Purists prefer horses of good solid colour, with four white legs to above the knees and hocks, with a broad white blaze on the face. In olden days however a white leg was seen as unlucky and a poem that has been handed down through the generations is testament to that:



Four white socks, send him away
Three white socks, keep him for a day
Two white socks, give him to a friend
One white sock, keep him till the end

Increasingly the horses being bred now have more white on their bodies, with many being a roan colour, where white hair blends with the basic colour to produce a marbled effect. The judges will also be looking for quality, style and fluidity of movement and in the case of the females, femininity is a requisite. As well as being used for showing, the Clydesdale is also to be seen pulling drays, used for weddings, and increasingly as a riding horse. This latter occupation has brought the breed to the notice of a whole new audience both in the UK, Europe and across the world. As a result its popularity under saddle is making it a desirable horse to own and numbers are steadily rising. Most Clydesdales are renowned for having a lovely calm temperament, making it reliable and honest. It is stronger compared to other lighter horses the same height, and can cope with a slightly heavier rider. Despite its size, these gentle giants are proving in arenas up and down the country to be versatile in all equestrian disciplines. It would seem the Clydesdale Horse is slowly making a comeback regardless of the colour of his legs.

The Clydesdale Horse Society

The Clydesdale Horse Society was established in 1877, approximately 150 years after the breed first evolved. Once the Society was formed in 1877, the gentlemen in charge began to make a record of the breeding of the horses to be contained within a stud book. The first retrospective book appeared in 1878 and since then a stud book has been produced almost every year, with the exception of the time the popularity and necessity of such horses took a dip when mechanism took over. At that time many breeders gave up and the breed was almost at extinction levels, however some kept going, out of sentimentality rather than expecting a return on the animals, and gradually the popularity of these lovely horses has grown again. However the breed is still recognized rare breed, designated so by the Rare Breeds Survival Trust and because of this status, the Clydesdale Horse Society receives an annual grant from the Horserace Betting Levy Board, this being engineered to improve the breed essentially by way of stallion premium schemes.

The Society is governed by a Council of around 50 who represent the membership from 15 Areas within the UK and Ireland. The Secretary is Mr Ian Roy and he can be contacted:

The Rare Breed Survival Trust

A key part of the Rare Breed Survival Trust's work involves collecting genetic material from both male and female animals, which is stored in the UK National Gene Bank, making it possible to re-create a breed if extinction occurs. With only 199 pedigree Clydesdale foals being registered last year, the fears are that the breed could face extinction within the next 10 years. In comparison 240 pedigree Shire foals and more worryingly, just 25 pedigree Suffolk foals were registered in the same period. It is not just the Clydesdale but all of the heavy breeds that are at risk. Currently the Clydesdale numbers in the UK are thought to be somewhere between 500 and 900 animals.

6. Entrants must be suitably dressed.
7. Entrants will be expected to walk and trot their animals as requested.
8. No outside assistance should be given unless in difficulties.
